

The Junk Tardis, designed by Susannah Leah

My toy is called the Junk Tardis, it is a console playset and a miniature version of the Junk Tardis which features in the "The Doctor's Wife". When constructed, the toy has a spinner where you can spin it around just like when Idris and the Doctor were travelling through space, it's very detailed and has a removable panel. My original design I drew for Blue Peter was arranged in a different way but my design ideas were just mixed around a bit, so I'm still taking all the credit! I feel that, even though it would be very difficult and fiddly to put on a toy, they should have included the coat hanger as pulling this starts the Tardis. As soon as the Junk Tardis was released onto shop shelves I proudly went and had a look, even though I don't receive any money from the toy's profits, it is still an amazing feeling to see my name on the box. Friends told me they had walked into shops and loudly talked about how they knew the designer of this toy, it's been incredible! The Junk Tardis is available in Argos, Tesco and other big toy selling shops, and also online. Just Google 'Junk Tardis Console Playset' and you can see pictures, descriptions, reviews and where to buy it. I think the price range starts as low as £14.99 in Argos if you want to buy it!
